Introduction

The internal non-exam assessment is a formal internal synoptic assessment that requires the learner to independently apply an appropriate selection of knowledge, understanding, skills and techniques, developed through the full course of study, in response to a real-world situation, to enable them to demonstrate an integrated connection and coherence between the different elements of the qualification.

The non-exam assessment will contribute 50% towards the overall qualification grade and therefore it is important that the learner produces work to the highest standard that they can. The learner, therefore, should not be entered for the internal synoptic project until they have been taught the full course of study, to ensure that they are in the best position to complete the internal synoptic project successfully.

What is synoptic assessment?

Synoptic assessment is an important part of a high-quality vocational qualification because it shows that learners have achieved a holistic understanding of the sector and that they can make effective connections between different aspects of the subject content and across the breadth of the assessment objectives in an integrated way. The Department for Education (DfE) has consulted with Awarding Organisations and agreed the following definition for synoptic assessment:

“A form of assessment which requires a candidate to demonstrate that s/he can identify and use effectively in an integrated way an appropriate selection of skills, techniques, concepts, theories, and knowledge from across the whole vocational area, which are relevant to a key task.”

Synoptic assessment enables learners to show that they can transfer knowledge and skills learnt in one context to resolve problems raised in another. To support the development of a synoptic approach, the qualification encourages learners to make links between elements of the course and to demonstrate how they have integrated and applied their increasing knowledge and skills.

As learners progress through the course, they will use and build upon knowledge and skills learnt across units. The internal synoptic project will test the learners' ability to respond to a real-world situation.

Case study

John is 68 years old. He lives on his own since his wife died 2 years ago.

Four months ago, John suffered a stroke. He has spent time in residential care to recuperate and is due to return home next week. The stroke has left John with difficulties with his mobility, co-ordination, and speech.

The current arrangement of John's care when he returns home is for John's son to visit him each morning before work to help him wash and dress and prepare his breakfast. John's neighbour will be able get his shopping and pop in for a cup of tea once a day.

Before his stroke John enjoyed a range of activities, such as his regular walk, an evening visit to the pub where he played cards and met with his friends. John also enjoyed reading, watching sport, and going to the theatre.

Using the case study and the two resources complete tasks 1 to 5.
