

shaping future qualifications.

How do you get involved?

It all starts with an idea.

At the first stage we need your agreement to be part of a development panel for a proposed qualification.

Our qualification development involves 4 main stages:

Concept
It's then the job of our development panel to decide on the concept of the new qualification.

1

Scoping

We capture as many suggestions as possible from our development panel, including items related to qualification purpose, content, size and progression. Where possible, this process is carried out remotely.

Development

Our subject experts work collaboratively to transform ideas into a meaningful qualification - establishing units, learning outcomes and ensuring that the requirements of regulators are considered at all times.

Feedback

Throughout development you can contribute ideas on content and provide feedback on draft units.

2

Review

We then share our qualification with the development panel. We ask them to 'check and challenge' what's been produced, including suitability of assessment and Guided Learning Hours.

3

Endorsement

To provide learners with progression and funding opportunities, we seek documented endorsement from the development panel.

We also seek endorsement from independent voices who can confirm the suitability of the qualification.

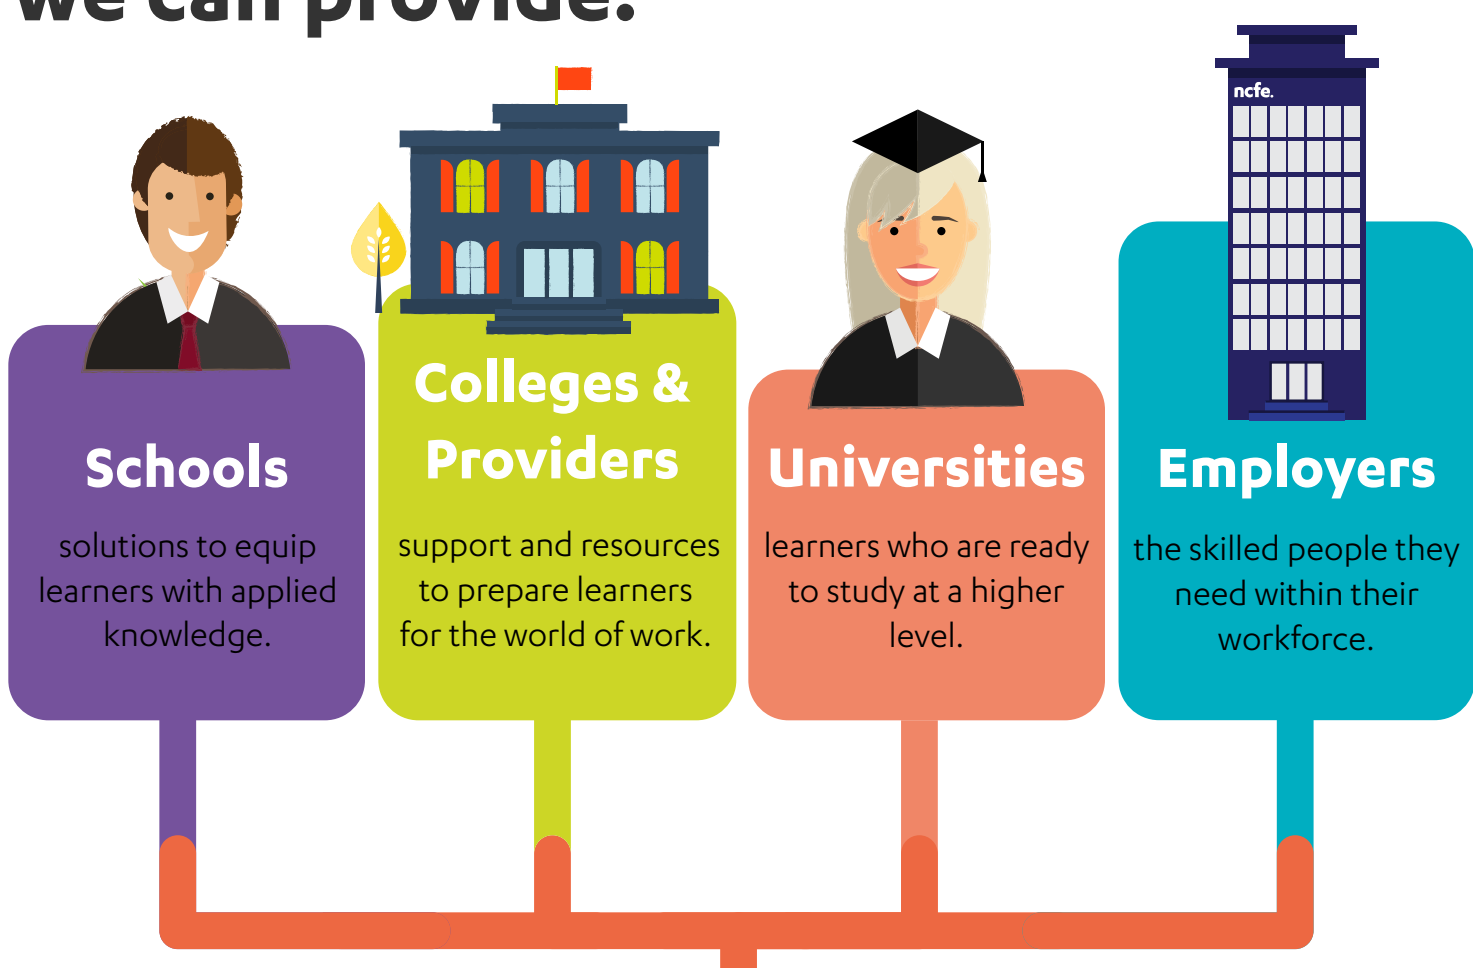

Support

We request that you provide a formal letter of support for the developed qualification.

4

By working together we can provide:

acorn
See it. Seek it. Seed it.

Our collaboration with schools, colleges, providers and employers ensures that our qualifications:

meet your needs

meet the needs of your learners

close the skills gap for the workforce

give your learners a competitive edge
